

"My open-flame grilling and rotisserie cooking is done over green mesquite and smoking is done with post oak."

About the Chef

Having spearheaded the popular "Dekker's" restaurant in Fulshear, Texas, Chef Anthonie Dekker is no stranger to success. Dekker hails from Holland where, as a boy, he was captivated by American TV westerns. Arriving stateside at 25, he held major culinary positions in Houston, Kemah and Minneapolis before returning to his beloved Texas as Executive Chef to the Houston Texans. He moved on to serve as private chef for one of south Texas' largest cattle ranches, pleasing the palates of notables from George HW Bush to George Strait. While Chef Dekker's passion is "great meat cooked on an open-fire mesquite grill," his menu reflects an obsession with all spectrums of tang. His gold standard: creative, scrumptious food delivered with impeccable service and genuine hospitality.

Tucked between lazy farm roads and sprawling ranch land, in cozy proximity to I-10, Katy, and the Energy Corridor, lies west Houston's favorite eatery. Featuring upscale fare in a down home atmosphere, Anthonie's is a unique indoor/outdoor concept boasting ancient wood-planked walls, polished concrete floors, a state-of-the-art open kitchen and a massive patio with superb sunset views. The warm ambience and neighborly reception are just a prelude to the restaurant's generous, lip-smacking meals. Add the well-appointed beer garden, fire pit and live music, and Anthonie's becomes the preferred destination of locals and travelers alike.
